

NASA Scientists Discover Giant Floating Object in Solar System

Written by Jarred Cohen on November 1, 2015

“{Becky} It is inexplicable how this became so big!”

CAPE CANAVERAL, FLORIDA- Researchers at the Nerd Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) were in the middle of ‘classified’ activities when they discovered the dull bass line of a Top 40 hit emanating from what appeared to be a dwarf planet.

The team, comprised of seven scientists all in their 50s, immediately ceased work on their black-op activities and focused their attention on the foreign object. Upon further investigation, the scientists discovered that the entity was in fact the posterior of American rapper Nicki Minaj. In an interview with Martian Weekly, team lead Ted Wilson, 53, claimed he saw it first, but he did not want to be the butt of every space joke for years to come. Upon discovery, “I said, ‘That’s no moon. That’s Nicki Minaj’s buttocks!’, I’m the only one of our team who has a teenage daughter so I guess you could say I’m with the times, yo.”

It seems that Ms. Minaj really does have a “Super(b)ass”, believes Mr. Wilson. “I mean, I’m pretty sure no other human being is capable of their own orbit purely based on their physical anatomy.” When approached by The Hallowed Hog for an interview with his client, Nicki’s manager told us to “f off” and threatened a restraining order if we tried again.

We’ll attempt further communication with this carbon-based life form in the future. In the meantime, though, you can find us on Thursday nights at Ollie’s lip syncing poorly to “Starships.” I guess her Anaconda didn’t want none unless we had buns, hun.