

Local man ignorant to all he does not have

Written by Seamus DeShill on December 5, 2015

Unhappiness Awareness Logo

An awareness campaign has been started by local advertisers to assist local man in realizing his unhappiness. Stanley Evergreen was seen this past week shamelessly relaxing in a public park completely unaware of how unhappy he was.

Stanley was inexplicably content while enjoying the beautiful day, he almost seemed to not be aware of how much happier he would be if he had just a few million dollars more, a prettier wife with larger breasts, and a better car, which he is undoubtedly a failure for not having.

Evergreen is reported to be an absolute wreck of a human being by a local business owner who remains anonymous.

Evergreen was last spotted not understanding the scope of all that was lacking from his life and could be easily satisfied with a few easy purchases says local advertisers.

Stanley's wife Sandra Evergreen is reported to be also unhappy. According to a friend of hers at the gym she works out at, she is often seen at the local gym contemplating her unhappiness.

"She is justifiably worried that her above-average calf size is holding her back from being as sexually attractive as all the other women, ruining her social standing and ability to be a good mother and wife," the friend said.

According to amateur nihilist philosopher and grade 11 student Logan Burns, Evergreen is unaware that his life also lacks meaning.

"Stanley, this disgrace to the concept of a man, lacking in both muscles and a muscle car is also ignorant of how meaningless his life is and how we're all going to die in the end," Burns said.