

Justin Trudeau to Legalize Marijuana Through Joint Operations

Written by Jenny Talia

In a mandate letter containing more top priorities than I've had girlfriends, the Prime Minister's Office has outlined new areas of focus for Canada's new Attorney General Jody Wilson-Raybould. This list of priorities contained such important initiatives as; reforming of the criminal justice system in terms of sentencing, finalizing a legal approach for the question of physician assisted, and, a laundry list of other virtuous and well intentioned policies to handle the current state of our legal system. But, let's be honest folks, you're looking at this article because it has marijuana in the title.

In the list of priorities, the one garnering the most attention to his request that the Minister of Justice, "Working with the Ministers of Public Safety and Emergency Preparedness and Health, create a federal-provincial-territorial process that will lead to the legalization and regulation of marijuana." This is a process that I am sure will be as swift and expedient as the legal system and public service combined, so my estimation is that Mr. Trudeau is preparing for a strategic release by 2025 at the earliest.

It comes to my surprise that a Liberal Prime Minister whose most notable "party trick" is falling down stairs supports marijuana legalization. Next you'll be telling me that he has also consumed the drug while serving as a Member of Parliament.
